Teaching activities

Involving people with intellectual disabilities
in teaching activities on higher education campuses

In the ICLIFE project people with intellectual disabilities experience what universities is about.

This output is used by teachers in university. It helps teachers to involve persons with an intellectual disability in teaching activities

People with intellectual disabilities have the right to go to school with other students.

In universities, teacher need training on how to support a person with intellectual disabilities.

All universities should support people with intellectual disabilities to be able to experience what universities are about.

This will allow persons with intellectual disabilities to become experts at helping other people in universities.

This booklet has been created for teachers to use in universities.

It is about how people with intellectual disabilities work as teachers in universities.

People with intellectual disabilities can train to become teachers in universities.

Teaching will give a person with intellectual disabilities a good experience.

The students will learn that persons with intellectual disability know a lot of things. They can be a teacher.
